Nackey S. Loeb School offers fall classes

MANCHESTER - It's time to register for the Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications' free fall classes.

The six-week session of Wednesday evening classes beginning Sept. 7 includes Political Reporting, Feature Writing, Photojournalism and Columns/Blogging. The Arts/Culture Criticism class previously scheduled for the fall session has been canceled because of unforeseen circumstances.

Union Leader Statehouse Bureau Chief Tom Fahey teaches the Political Reporting course. Coming as campaigning steps up for the 2012 Presidential Primary, there will be plenty of politics to write about. The class is offered from 5-6:30 p.m.

Feature Writing helps those who want to write more colorful and engaging stories. Taught by Steve Billingham, a former editor at The Eagle-Tribune and adjunct journalism professor at Chester College, this course delves into using detail and good quotes to bring stories alive. Students must bring their own laptop. The class is offered from 6:30-8 p.m.

Taught by veteran photographer Geoff Forester, Photojournalism helps students identify and use the elements of good feature and news photography. Through hands-on activities and assignments, students learn the skills of telling a story through photos and produce a photo essay. Students will need a digital SLR camera. The class is offered from 6:30-8 p.m.

Citizen journalists, letter writers and anyone who likes to share observations or opinions on-line or in newspaper columns are invited to Columns/Blogging, taught by Nashua Telegraph columnist and blogger Stacy Milbouer and former Boston Globe columnist Tom Long. Stacy and Tom pass along tips on writing personal essays, columns and blogs. The class is offered from 5:00-6:30 p.m.

All classes are free of charge to students of all ages.

Applications are available at www.loeb.school.org or by calling 627-0005.
