Nackey S. Loeb School offers fall classes

MANCHESTER _ Classes at the Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications this fall include our newest class, Creative Writing II, and a dose of photography, memories, videography and photo editing for everyone from middle-schoolers to retirees.

The six-week session of Wednesday evening classes from Sept. 13 – Oct. 18 also includes Photojournalism, Photoshop Elements - The Basics, Video Production and Writing Memoirs. All classes but Photoshop are free of charge.

Students of our popular Creative Writing class requested a more in-depth follow-up session, so husband/wife team Stacy Milbouer and Tom Long are offering Creative Writing II. Having taken the basic Creative Writing class is helpful, but anyone with experience in writing would benefit from this class. It will include weekly writing exercises and work on one or two extensive projects including a polished short story. Class time: 5:30-7.

Videographer and college instructor Michael Johnston presents Video Production. He teaches how to prepare videos suitable for professional or family use. Students learn how to frame action, record sounds to support visuals and bring the elements together to tell a story. Students will need a video camera, a Smartphone or an SLR type camera in video mode, as well as a digital recorder and laptop with video editing software. Free software such as iMovie or Moviemaker are suitable. Class time: 5:30-7 p.m.

Taught by veteran photographer and Concord Monitor photo editor Geoff Forester, Photojournalism helps students identify and use the elements of good feature and news photography. Students learn the skills of telling a story through photos and produce a photo essay. Students will need a digital SLR camera. Class time: 7-8:30 p.m.

In the Photoshop class, instructor Debi Rapson covers basic techniques, ethics and the logic behind the program menu. Class time: 5:30-7. Fee: $50.

In Writing Memoirs, TV producer and writer Carolyn Choate offers ways to write about an aspect of your life worth sharing. Award-winning author Dan Szczeny will join Carolyn to offer his insight. Dan is the 2016 winner of the NH Literary Award in Non-Fiction for his memoir, The Nepal Chronicles: Marriage, Mountains, and Momos in the Highest Place on Earth. Students must bring their own laptop. Class time: 7-8:30.
