Loeb School presents leadership workshop

The Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications is looking for new leaders, or those who want to improve their leadership skills.

The school is presenting a half-day workshop, Leadership: The Commitment to Make it Happen, on March 23. The session is designed for those who are beginning to take on leadership positions in their business or organization, or those who are seeking to improve their knowledge of leadership principles. The goal is to give attendees a solid foundation of methods that can inspire and motivate those around them.

The instructor, NH State Police Lt. John Marasco, will focus on the importance of effective communication, collaboration and meaningful interpersonal relationships in leadership development.

Conflict prevention; rapport building; and strategies to improve employee morale, motivation and efficiency also will be highlighted.

The workshop is being presented from 9 a.m. to noon. Registration is $30 at loeb.school.org or 627-0005.
