Sunshine Week features New Hampshire Right-to-Know discussion

In recognition of Sunshine Week, a national initiative to promote open government, the Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications and New England First Amendment Coalition will present a discussion concerning the key to open government in New Hampshire -- the state Right to Know Law.

The panel discussion: "The Right to Know in New Hampshire: Where are we, where are we going?" will be held at the Loeb School in Manchester at 7 p.m. on March 15.

Panelists include:

- William L. Chapman, attorney and Board member, New England First Amendment Coalition;
- Lisa M. English, Senior Assistant Attorney General;
- Rick Gagliuso, attorney and Board member, New England First Amendment Coalition;
- Cordell A. Johnston, attorney and lobbyist, New Hampshire Municipal Association;
- David Saad, President, NH Right to Know, a citizens' group working to improve access to government in New Hampshire;
- Trent Spinner, President, New Hampshire Press Association.

The panel will be moderated by First Amendment attorney Gregory V. Sullivan, a board member of both sponsoring organizations, who represents various media outlets in open government cases.

Sunshine Week is a national initiative to promote a dialogue about the importance of open government and freedom of information. Participants include news media, civic groups, libraries, nonprofits, schools and others interested in the public's right to know.

Admission is free. The Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications is at 749 E. Industrial Park Drive, Manchester.
